November 11, 2003- ColoSpace, Inc. a leading provider of Colocation, Disaster Recovery, and Managed Services in New England, has announced the successful deployment of Wireless Ethernet (WiFi) hotspots in each of its Internet Data Centers. This deployment enables all ColoSpace customers to access a free Internet feed to aid in the configuration and on-going maintenance of their Colocation service.

"We believe that this facility enhancement, provided at no cost to our customers, gives technicians more flexibility with the administration of their equipment. This offering underscores ColoSpace's commitment to deliver the highest quality service offering available." Said Aaron Sawchuk, ColoSpace's VP of Technology.

The Internet connection utilized to support the free wireless network is the same ultra-reliable bandwidth provided to each customer at the colocation facility. In addition, data is protected with a firewall and encrypted with 128-bit encryption.

Existing ColoSpace customers can find the wireless connection information on the ColoSpace Customer Management Console.
